Disability support The definition of disability according to the Disability Discrimination Act 2010 is "A physical or mental impairment which has a substantial and long-term adverse effect on a person's ability to carry out normal day-to-day activities" (long-term in this definition is taken to mean more than 12 months). Anyone who has a diagnosis of HIV, cancer or multiple sclerosis is automatically treated as disabled under the Act.

The Institute of Cancer Research do not discriminate on the grounds of a person's disability, and are committed to providing appropriate support for staff and students with disabilities. The following information will assist us to do this.

Information disclosed regarding your disability and/or additional needs will be dealt with in the strictest confidence.

Without knowledge of your disability, it may be difficult to fully support your needs and make necessary adjustments for you. If you require further information or advice about the support we can offer at any stage of your application, or whilst a student at the ICR, please contact us at summerscholarships@icr.ac.uk
